

CONTENTS

Foreword: Philippe Mangin	5
Preface: Henri Nallet	6

Part One A TIME OF FOUNDERS (1945-1961) 8

CHAPTER 1

Cooperation and cooperatives

The emergence and development of a universal model 10

- Charles Fourier and Robert Owen establish the fundamental principles of the cooperative
- Trade unions and farming cooperatives started developing in France in 1880 against a backdrop of economic depression
- French agricultural representation organises at the end of the 19th century
- From the "Charte Paysanne" to the birth of the first large farming cooperative unions (1940-1945)

CHAPTER 2

Strength in unity

As French agriculture was rebuilt from 1945 to 1961, cooperative unions emerged, grew and extended their legitimacy 22

- Cooperatives as vectors of economic reconstruction and agricultural renewal
- UNCAA and UNCAC as "daughters" of the CGA and sister unions
- Initial UNCAA work, on nitrogen fertilizers and binder twine
- UNCAC from 1945 to 1948: the importance of federal, economic and technical action
- UNCAA and UNCAC establish three joint subsidiaries between 1952 and 1960

CHAPTER 3

Return to a bipolar model

A spate of pro-Catholic cooperative unions spring up in the wake of the 1949-1961 laws on agricultural cooperatives 36

- A return to an historic bipolar stance
- The La Fayette group organises and develops rapidly

CHAPTER 4

UNCAC's rise to power

The grain union reaches company size and lays down the foundations for becoming a major European operator (1949-1961) 46

- The major principles behind UNCAC's economic and technical decisions (1949-1955)
- The La Grande Paroisse silo as a flagship investment on a European scale
- Development at national and international level (1956-1961)
- UNCAC, a player in the CAP and the European grains market

Timeline, Part One 62

Part Two THE BOOM YEARS (1962-1990) 64

CHAPTER 5

L'UNCAC changes dimension

Across-the-board development from 1962 to 1974 in storage, export, research, seeds, transport and equipment 66

- UNCAC affirms export ambitions, develops storage and becomes an equipment supplier
- Storage and export ambitions, research strategy
- Jack Lequertier (1918-1989), bold businessman, staunch European and visionary cooperative player

CHAPTER 6

The La Fayette group: from growth to crisis

Energetic and rapid growth stalls, casting doubts on the leadership and strategy (1962-1974) 88

- Rapid commercial growth fostered by a unified and diverse cooperative structure (1962-1968)
- More than a growth crisis, a challenge to the development model (1969-1975)

CHAPTER 7

UNCAA plots its course

Structural changes, progress in all activities, a foothold in animal feeds (1962-1974) 100

- UNCAA pursues its traditional role and becomes more aggressive
- Multi-services and decentralisation: UNCAA fine-tunes its positioning
- An attempted takeover of UNCAA's fertilizer business
- UCAAB, a real subsidiary and new growth driver in cattle feed
- GAMM builds its headquarters at Porte Maillot in Paris

CHAPTER 8

The advent of the GAMM group

Despite continuing disagreements between the rival Mac Mahon and La Fayette unions (1966-1967), UNCAC and UNCAA join forces under a common brand (1975-1990) 116

- UGCAF uninterested in the merger suggested by UNCAC (1967)
- UNCAA develops a culture of diversity
- UNCAC sets out to conquer international markets (1975-1990)

CHAPTER 9

The La Fayette group, on the merger trail

A new start, stability, progress, questioning and new operating losses (1975-1990) 138

- The years of recovery and economic turnaround (1976-1985)
- "Does UGCAF still serve any purpose?" (1986-1990)

Timeline, Part Two 146

Part Three

A TIME OF MERGERS (1991-2000) 148

CHAPTER 10

The birth and rise of Sigma

Uniting the strengths of grain cooperatives to move into international markets (1991-2000) 150

- Sigma works to find the highest common denominator
- Structuring and developing the seed business
- Grain exports spearhead Sigma's activity
- A time for choices and vigilance

CHAPTER 11

UNCAA, Europe's largest bulk purchasing and services centre for agricultural supplies

A pause, a revamped strategy, and unstoppable growth (1992-2000) 164

- Seeking a second wind in a singular economic context (1992-1995)
- Back on track to growth, UNCAA modernises its businesses and structure (1996-2001)
- On the way to internationalisation and the inevitable merger

Timeline, Part Three 184

Part Four

THE BIRTH AND RISE OF INVIVO (2001-2012) 186

CHAPTER 12

The arrival of InVivo: the alliance of the animal and plant sectors

Focused on life (2001-2006) 188

- UNCAA and Sigma together give rise to a giant: InVivo
- The service-company business, grouped together in France under the Inzo• brand, pursues European expansion
- The new InVivo group defines and implements its strategic position (2002-2006)

CHAPTER 13

The world is changing, InVivo too

Nothing will ever be the same... (2007) 198

- The acquisition of Evialis: a bold international growth strategy
- Urgent change: Michel Fosseppez and Patrice Gollier build a modern enterprise

CHAPTER 14

Portrait of a cooperative group on the move

History is written in the present (2008-2012) 208

- Structuring a new company to face the major agricultural and food challenges
- The HR project places people at the core of the Group's strategy
- InVivo Agro combines productivity with responsibility
- InVivo Animal Nutrition and Health structures its French business and pursues an active international acquisitions and development policy
- InVivo Grains Technical progress contributes to global food security
- InVivo General Public, tapping the growth in leisure gardening
- Markets test the Union's solidity
- Uniting to build the future of agricultural cooperation
- Innovative, stimulating and structuring projects

Timeline, Part Four 222

Postscript: Patrice Gollier 224

Bibliography and sources 226

Index of names cited 227

Contents 229

Acknowledgements – Photo credits 232